

FIRST NATIONAL BANK AT LONDON IS CLOSED

Capital of Laurel County Institution Impaired, According to National Examiner Kincheloe.

London, Ky., April 8.—As a result of a wholesale withdrawal of deposits, following rumors of strained financial conditions the First National Bank was forced to close its doors today by order of the Comptroller of Currency. National Bank Examiner W. P. Kincheloe, who has been here for two or three days making an examination of the bank, declines to make any statement relative to the cause of the suspension or the condition of the bank.

This bank was established in 1888 and has always been considered one of the strongest and safest banks in Eastern Kentucky. The last published report of condition as of March 4, shows individual deposits subject to check, amounting to $263,000, time deposits, $44,000; loans and discounts, $281,000 and paid in capital stock, $50,000.

The suspension of the bank has caused great excitement in London and Laurel County and much harm to business will result. It is not likely that any depositor will lose anything when matters are finally adjusted. Cashier McCalla Fitzgerald and President W. B. Catching express the hope that the suspension will only be temporary, and that business will be resumed in the near future.

We have been informed by the managers of the Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, that they will have the new machinery for the plant here within the next few days, and as soon as men and money can place same in running condition the new system will be started. We note with much interest the improvement of the new lines of poles erected by the company, they are certainly a credit to the ones first erected, and if the remainder of the apparatus is in keeping with the poles, the light plant will be a success in this little city.

Animals Have Odd Fears.

Elephants, Lions and Tigers Dislike Mice and Rats.

It is well known that many people have an inexplicable aversion to certain animals. Most people have a horror for snakes and other things that creep the earth. Captain Winfred Gonzales, the Director of the German Zoological Annex, with Sun Brothers' World's Progressive Shows, in speaking of the peculiarities of animals, says: "Animals, like human beings, have their likes and dislikes. Put certain animals together and you will expect a fight, while another two will become the friendliest comrades. Women are proverbial for their horror of mice, but one would hardly expect an elephant to show fear at such a tiny foe. This fear was recently shown at Winter-quarters, Macon, Georgia, where the Sun Brothers spent their Winter months' lay off, during some experiments to find out the likes of animals in a menagerie. The huge animal spotted the mouse as soon as it was placed in its enclosure. The elephant gave evidence of fear immediately.

"With one of his big feet it could have smashed the tiny intruder out of existence. Instead, it stood for a few minutes motionless, and apparently helpless with fright. Not until the mouse had been removed was the elephant to be pacified, and it was some hours before it regained its normal courage.

"Mice, indeed, inspire fear, or something akin to it, in a great many animals. A Bengal tiger trembled and uttered long, mournful howls the whole time that a mouse was in its cage. Two rats were introduced into a lion's cage, and the same fear was shown by the larger animal for the smaller ones. There have been many suggestions put forward for this extraordinary dislike of these large animals for mice. One very probable one is that mice and rats have a peculiar smell which is highly repulsive to their enemies. A Puma, however, has no such fear. When a rat was introduced into its cage, the huge cat made a spring and that rat was a goner."

The Sun Brothers will exhibit their big animal annex and their many clever sights and performances, afternoon and night, on Thursday, April 10th, at Barbourville, Ky.

Death of W. J. Caudill.

We were pained to learn of the death of Hon. W. J. Caudill, formerly of this place, now of Hobart, Oklahoma, who died suddenly at his home last Sunday.

Mr. Caudill came to this county about the year 1889, and went into the mercantile business, and made a success. He was a staunch member of the Baptist Church, and was once a State Senator. He was a very progressive man, and did a great deal for the fellow that was in the ditch. Mr. Caudill was here the past summer shaking hands with his old friends, and while here renewed his old friendship and acquaintances. He will be missed by his many friends both here and in Hobart.

A Pretty Wedding

As we announced last week in the Advocate, one of the prettiest weddings for many years was that of Mr. W. S. Hudson and Miss Ida Cole, at the Presbyterian Church, Tuesday at 1 o'clock. The Church was beautifully decorated, and the house was filled to overflowing.

Thomas D. Tinsley was best man, and Misses Jess Ballard and Myrtle Cole were bridesmaids; the ceremony was performed by Rev. John MacMillen, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, and the ceremony was beautiful in language and delivery.

After the ceremony the happy couple were hurriedly taken in an automobile to the Station, where they boarded train No. 12 for an extended trip through the South. They will return in fifteen or twenty days, and take up their residence here where Mr. Hudson has already prepared his residence for occupancy.

We wish for them many years of happiness during their voyage over life's rugged sea.

Mr. Hudson is well known and liked here, having been reared in this city; while his amiable wife is also well known, she being the daughter of Hon. P. V. Cole, Asst. State Mine Inspector, is a graduate in Music and art, and is an accomplished young lady of whom we all feel proud.

Reason for Placing Wedding Ring.
The third finger is the only one where two principal nerves belong to two distinct trunks; the thumb is supplied with its principal nerves from the radial nerve, as are also the forefinger, the middle finger, and the thumb side of the ring finger, while the ulnar nerve furnishes the little finger, and the other side of the ring finger, at the point of extremity of which a real union takes place; hence the ancient reason for placing the wedding ring on this finger.

REGIONAL BANK MAP OF KENTUCKY

All of Kentucky East of County Lines From Boone On North To McCreary On South Goes To Cleveland Bank; Rest of State, Including Louisville, To St. Louis Bank.

Louisville, Ky.—According to bankers, the splitting of Kentucky between the regional districts of St. Louis and Cleveland will divide much of the state's banking business between those cities.

Country national banks are required to keep their reserves, when the new currency law becomes fully operative, in the regional bank of their district, and this means that reserves of many country national banks now held in vaults in Louisville institutions will be moved to either St. Louis or Cleveland. Reserves of the national banks of Louisville—25 per cent of deposits under the present law—half of which are kept here and the remainder in central reserve cities—must go to the St. Louis regional bank, though under the new law the reserve requirement will not be as great.

Capital and surplus of the eight national banks of Louisville aggregate between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000, and these institutions will be obliged to subscribe to over $500,000 of the capital stock of the St. Louis regional bank, as the law requires member banks of the regional banks to subscribe to 6 per cent of their combined capital and surplus. All of the national banks of Louisville have agreed to enter the new currency system. Under the law formal application for the stock must be made by each bank after the Controller of the Currency has forwarded to each bank an application form to be approved by the Organization Committee.

Louisville bankers will now turn their attention to securing for Louisville a branch regional bank. Section 3 of the new law provides that each Federal reserve bank shall establish branch banks within its district, to be operated by a board of directors under rules and regulations approved by the Federal Reserve Board. Directors of these banks must possess the same qualifications as directors of the parent banks, and four are to be selected by the reserve bank and three by the Federal Reserve Board.

Louisville began its fight for a regional bank soon after the enactment of the currency law. The Louisville Clearing House Association took the lead in the campaign and appointed Oscar Fenley, F. M. Gettys, H. C. Rodes, the president of the association, and Maj. John H. Leathers a committee to prepare Louisville's case. Senator Ollie James and Representative Shirley added their influence and interest. The committee began by securing endorsements of bankers and business men all over the South, as well as in sections north of the river.

When Secretaries McAdoo and Houston went to New Orleans in February to conduct hearings, the committee took a score of Kentucky business men and bankers and Messrs. Shirley and James to the Crescent City to present Louisville's argument, after weeks had been spent in the preparation of data bearing upon the city's industrial, geographical and financial importance. Senator James and Mr. Shirley were speakers at the hearing, supplementing the statement of the case made by John W. Barr, Jr. A district proposed by Louisville embraced Kentucky, Southern Indiana, Northern Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

Mr. Fenley expressed amazement when told that Atlanta and Richmond had been made reserve centers. He was also greatly surprised to learn that two Missouri cities—St. Louis and Kansas City—had been chosen.

TWO ENTHUSIASTIC AND PROGRESSIVE YOUNG KENTUCKY NEWSPAPER MEN

Corbin, Ky.—There are in southern Kentucky two enthusiastic and progressive young newspaper men. They publish the Corbin Times in a live-railroad town. These young men have been very successful in the publishing business. James J. Price, the business manager and foreman, entered the newspaper field as a "devil" seven years ago, and very shortly afterward became foreman of the office in which he worked. In the fall of 1911 he became sole owner and proprietor.

The advertising in the Times has increased 150 per cent within eight months and the subscription list has also shown rapid growth. William A. Price, M. A., B. S., B. Ph., B. Ed., is the editor and became identified with the Times in 1912, and has been continuously associated with the paper since. Mr. Price had been instructor for a number of years, and regretted to leave his teaching profession, but thinks there is nothing like newspaper work, and will make it his lifetime work. At the present time Mr. Price is principal of the city school. J. J. Price in addition to his newspaper work finds time to be of service to the city of Corbin in the capacity of city clerk.

MAYO FIGHTING FOR HIS OWN LIFE

SPECTACULAR CAREER EQUALED BY VALIANT FIGHT IN CIN. CINCINNATI HOSPITAL.

SPECIAL PHYSICIANS RETAINED

Entire Floor of Jewish Hospital Made Almost a Southern Mansion—Battle Against Death.

Western Newspaper Union News Service BULLETIN.

"Mr. Mayo has had the best day he has experienced in two weeks, and there is a marked improvement in his condition," was the terse bulletin given out by Dr. R. C. Wilkinson, who is attending John C. Mayo, Kentucky capitalist, who has been a patient at the Jewish Hospital recently, suffering with chronic Bright's disease. Friends of Mr. Mayo who visited him say that he appears more cheerful, and that there is every indication that he will continue to improve.

Lexington, Ky.—Waging a battle for life that is typical of his career, Col. John C. Mayo, wealthy mine and timber operator of Kentucky, is spending a fortune in Cincinnati in his effort to regain health. The spectacular and sudden rise from a mountain school teacher to a man of great wealth within 25 years Col. Mayo amassed a fortune estimated at $30,000,000—is being equaled by his magnificent fight for life. Col. Mayo has been in Cincinnati since March 1, receiving treatment for Bright's disease at the Jewish hospital. In that time, it is estimated that he has spent no less than $50,000 to secure every possible advantage against the approach of death, which eminent physicians declared is to be the inevitable result of his affliction.

In an effort to prolong his days, physicians rushed him to Cincinnati from his home in Paintsville, Ky. Here he was placed in charge of Dr. R. R. Wilkinson, Dr. Alfred Friedlander and Dr. Oliver P. Holt. A special train was used to make railroad connections from Paintsville, and then a special car was pressed into service. It was made plain by members of the family that no expense must be spared in this contest with death. Riches are powerless to purchase life and health, so we have been told by philosophers, but it has remained for Col. Mayo to demonstrate that the approach of death may be retarded and the ravages of disease allayed by the skillful application, as it were, of poultices of gold.

Since the arrival of Col. Mayo at the Jewish hospital a new vista of splendor has been opened for employees and visitors of that institution. Mrs. Mayo, who has taken almost an entire pavilion at the hospital, comprising an entire floor. These rooms are used for the comfort of Col. Mayo's friends and business associates, who visit him from day to day. His son and daughter are on hand whenever it is possible for them to leave their studies or when the conditions of their parent warrants hurried trips to Cincinnati. Another room is used for consultation of the physicians, while there are still others used as sleeping quarters by Dr. Wilkinson, who remains at the hospital almost every night, and other physicians. Four trained nurses are in constant attendance and special telephones have been installed for the convenience of those who are the Mayo guests. But for the atmosphere of the sickroom, one would imagine that this apartment in the midst of a great hospital were a part of some delightful Southern mansion.

BOY SCOUTS FIGHT FIRE.

Harlan, Ky.—Boy Scouts of Harlan fought a forest fire on the mountain side west of Harlan and extinguished it after a valiant and highly enjoyable fight so effectively that there was not the slightest trace of smoldering embers when they had finished. He has taken more interest in the movement perhaps than any other man in Kentucky, and has enrolled in Harlan county hundreds of the youths.

Miram's Duty Rounds Out Thirty-fifth Year as Publisher of the Flemingsburg (Ky.) Democrat.

Flemingsburg, Ky.—Hiram Duley, the publisher of the Times-Democrat, has rounded out his thirty-fifth year as publisher of that splendid newspaper. Mr. Duley is one of the grand old men of Kentucky and an editor he is known throughout the state as a brilliant, perceptive and a deep student of economics and subjects pertaining to the welfare of the Blue Grass state. Mr. Duley began his newspaper career at Aulville, Mo., in December, 1872, and in the following spring began the publication of the Aulville Times. This publication after one year's existence was merged with the Lexington Censorian, then owned by Pat Donahy, one of the well-known characters of the times. In 1871 Mr.

Hiram Duley, of Flemingsburg, Ky. Duley bought the Aulville plant and moved it to Pleasant Hill. Mr. Duley relates in a reminiscent way that the grasshoppers which infested the country at that time arrived in Pleasant Hill on the same day he did. The grasshoppers covered the town by the million, spreading out for several miles as thick as a blanket of snow. Mr. Duley left Missouri in 1875 and returned to Kentucky, where he later established a printing office. February 19, 1879, he purchased the Rambler, a weekly publication, and changed the name to the Times. Three years later he purchased the Democrat and merged the two papers under the name of the Times-Democrat.

Birmingham, Ala., April 8.—Oscar W. Underwood, majority leader of the house of representatives at Washington, was nominated over Richmond Pearson Hobson by a substantial majority. Underwood's campaign managers said his lead was about twenty thousand.

The weather throughout the state was ideal for the primaries and indications were that the total vote would be the largest in years. While several personal encounters at the polls were reported none was of a serious nature.

Former Governor B. B. Comer led the three other candidates in the gubernatorial contest. Charles Henderson of Troy was second, and R. F. Kolb of Montgomery was third.

John W. Abercrombie, representative from the state at large, and Representative J. T. Hedlin from the Fifth district were unopposed.

Detroit, Mich., April 8.—Returns from the 12 Michigan counties which voted on Monday on the local option question gave the drys a victory in the winning of Ingham county, in which Lansing, the state capital, is located. The wets won over one of the other counties and lost one to the anti-saloon forces. Ingham county, which has been wet, went dry by more than seven hundred votes.

The county situation follows: Clare went from dry to wet; Roscommon and Ingham went from wet to dry; Midland, Kalamazoo, Mecosta, Benzie, Shlawassee and Wexford remained dry, the latter two by small majorities. Oscoda, containing one saloon, went over to the drys. Arenac and Ogemaw remained wet.

TRouble AGAIN IS STARTED FOR WASHINGTON WHEN VILLA EXPELS SPANISH

Vigorous Protest Is Sent To Carranza Urging That He Modify Order of General.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Washington.—Vigorous representations went from the American government to Gen. Carranza, constitutional chief, urging that he modify the order of Gen. Villa, expelling Spaniards from Torreon. This situation is giving grave concern to authorities here. The United States has undertaken to extend to Spaniards in Mexico the same protection it affords Americans resident there, and Ambassador Riano has been assured that nothing will be left undone to assure for the unfortunates at Torreon every right to which they are entitled under international law and usage.

That Spain proposes to exhaust every resource to protect her people in the revolution-born republic was made public when Mr. Adm. Mayo, at Tampico, cabled the navy department that the commanding officer of the British cruiser Hermodio had been instructed to care for Spaniards at this besieged federal port. Officials here did not comment on this development.

All Turn to Jerusalem

Sacred Scenes of Crucifixion and Resurrection Attract Pilgrims in Thousands at Easter Time

TYPICAL of the passing of winter gloom and of the coming of summer splendor, that was Easter from the beginning, the very embryo of nature study, the spontaneous expression of man's delight in the ever joyful and beautiful annual miracle of the springtime. "A thousand hills" in verdure clad, rare valleys spangled with vee wildlings, nurtured in nature's endless chain of gardens; vast forests putting on robes of spring and those trees which in their fruition offer feasts to humanity, first holding out their flowery offerings to their deities; flawless skies with cloudlets by way of making the blue dome more radiant—that was the world's pagan springtime up to that springtime of springtime, that Sunday of Sundays, which we now celebrate as the chief festival of the resurrection of Christ and of the Christian era.

Easter! glorious Easter! Herald of nature's year, symbol of life eternal! Upon Easter all the Christian churches the wide world over hold commemorative services. Millions of voices are raised in praise; millions of heads are bowed in worship.

In the primitive church it was one of the special days for baptism. The Latin name of the Octave, or the following Sunday, Dominicus in albis, preserves the memory of the custom of the newly-baptized, wearing their white robes throughout the entire Week. Russian Christians, who now make pilgrimages to the Holy Land, however poor they may be, and however much they may need the room for food and extra clothing, carry with them one precious parcel which contains the white robe for the baptism in the Jordan, to which they go after celebrating Easter in Jerusalem. After this baptism the robe is never put on again until it serves as a shroud.

Going down to Jericho from Jerusalem and returning two or three companies of pilgrims will be met, thousands of them in each group, walking single file as a rule, though some of them ride on donkeys. In the distance they look like ants winding round and round the mountain roads, the blackness of the little line showing all the clearer from afar, because there are no other living things, animal or vegetable, to break the wild and awful mountainous monotony of the clayey and chalky limestone chasms and precipices.

However, compelling in interest other parts of Palestine may be at Easter, the thoughts of the Christian world, as well as the steps of pilgrims, turn Jerusalemward. And of all the places of overwhelming interest in Jerusalem those connected with the crucifixion and the resurrection are of the most vital and compelling interest. The various sects have shed blood following their arguments over sacred matters heretofore, but, according to the guide-book, the Church of the Holy Sepulcher covers the traditional spot of both. Reached through narrow, crooked, none too clean streets, this church fills the visitor with mingled emotions. Squatting on the stone-paved space before the south entrance are sellers of beads, evil eyes and various souvenirs made of olive wood.

Once inside, one finds armed Moslem custodians, who are necessary to keep the peace between the jealous Christian pilgrims from various parts of the world, some of them half-starved fanatics, who have sacrificed everything except life itself to get there. And here one finds hanging any number of beautiful metal lamps. The Greeks are allowed a certain number, the Armenians so many, and so on.

Almost as soon as the guard is passed the large "Stone of Anoint-ment" is reached. On this the body of Jesus is said to have lain when it was anointed by Nicodemus. The principal part of this building is the rotunda of the sepulcher. The chapel of the sepulcher is about six feet each way, and very low, 43 precious lamps hanging from the ceiling. It is here on the split marble slab, which serves as an altar, that the members of the Catholic church (Latin, Greek, Armenian chiefly), or their friends, have blessed rosaries and crucifixes. It is entered through the vestibule called the Angels' chapel. The vast and dim church is explored by the pains-taking visitor with guide, lamp and opera glasses. It varies from the finished, marble-faced and much decorated parts to others that suggest dusty store rooms in neglected attics.

In 1894 the site known as the Garden Tomb was purchased for $10,000 by Church of England people, this body believing it to be the site of the entombment. It is a beautiful spot with quantities of fragrant rosemary, wands forever swaying along with the rosy-fruited racemes of the poplar trees. It is very near to Gordon's Calvary, which is best seen from the entrance to Solomon's quarries, though just outside the Damascus gate, these quarries extend under the city to a distance of 700 feet. One authority says that from them enough marble was taken to build ten cities the size of Jerusalem. No wonder "no sound was heard," since all the cutting was done before the stones were taken out.

"Why Weepst Thou."

Wherever grief walks lonely in its garden, an upward glance again reveals him, and there comes again the gentle question, like a soft touch on the heart's door to invite confession. Why should any one go uncomfited? To every one who grieves or suffers, the tender Lord stands as close to day as he did to Mary on that first Easter morning. And to one who really takes the comfort that is offered, there is ever after, no one hour or day of comfort only, but a year-long Easter.

Glorious Easter Message.

How it changes the outlook on life, this Easter message! How differently we look upon the inhumanities of this life, the unfairness, the indignity, the sorrow of it all. It is for such a tiny part of our life. Just the schooling period! All the evidence shows there will be a balancing of accounts and a better state of things for those who push for it, on the other side of the grave.

COUNTRY EDITOR HAS GRAVE DUTY

IN THE UPBUILDING OF OUR COUNTRY AND RURAL COMMUNITIES.

SAYS HARRY GIOVANNOLI

In Address to the Southern Educational Conference at Louisville—A Good Plan to Follow.

Louisville, Ky.—At the educational conference of Southern business men, farmers and educators, Harry Giovannoli, editor of the Lexington Leader, introduced the discussion of plans whereby the country editor can take an effective part "in the upbuilding of our country communities." Mr. Giovannoli said, in part:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I have been asked to "outline a plan for the country editor to take an effective part in the upbuilding of our country communities."

In the "Yale Review" for April Mr. Edward M. Chapman has a thoughtful and highly instructive article on Rural Cooperation. In his opening sentence he says:

"The most casual reader of magazine and newspaper must have observed lately a re-awakened worship of 'the country.' Reams of good paper and ink of many colors have been offerred upon its altar. Editors have become its priests and publishers its Levites."

Mr. Chapman, who is writing exclusively on the subject of rural credits, touched the keynote of the present theme when he suggested that only when the country is rightly organized does it "provide at once a living and a life," and it may be said, with equal force, that the country editor has it within his power to become of the "essence rather than of the incidents of the scene."

The relationship between the newspaper and the community is greatly different from that which exists between the people and any other semi-public institution. From a period so remote that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the newspaper has been regarded as peculiarly the spokesman and tribune of the people. The very origin of the newspaper as we know it today was this desire by men to have some medium by means of which not news but private opinions could be disseminated. The early pamphleteer voiced the political creed or the malignant attacks of an individual or cabal. Through all the years, however, which have passed since journalism became a profession, instead of a diversion, that quality of thought leadership which brought it into being has marked its career and will doubtless be associated with it until the end.

The "country editor" far more than his brother of the city bears to his readers that peculiar relationship which exists between the press and the people. He has a wider and a more intimate acquaintance with his readers, enters more familiarly into their daily lives, sees more of them in their homes and in the social circle.

In outlining a plan for the country editor to take an effective part in the upbuilding of our country communities, it is necessary first to determine the objects which such a plan should comprehend, and to then select those causes which should engage the most careful attention at the hands of the country newspaper. An enumeration of the objects which might properly come within the scope of such a plan readily extends through a long list. They include the public school, the church, the liquor traffic, roads, coun-

TO HOLD SCHOOL TOURNAMENT.

Shelbyville, Ky.—The success which attended the first McHenry Rhodes graded school tournament in Shelbyville last spring has induced the other schools in the district to select this year. The date has not been definitely determined, but May 14, 15 and 16 probably will be chosen. Harrodsburg and Springfield, which were not represented last year, have signified their intention of entering the competition.

ty and municipal government, taxation, the county infirmary or "poor house," agriculture and marketing facilities, election laws, and the ever-present question of how far every man is his brother's keeper to the extent that this relates to the morals of the community at large.

Naturally, in calculating the degree of influence which the country editor may properly exercise in promoting the growth and development of these objects, one must at the outset weigh the personality of the editor. It is often said that a newspaper is neither better nor worse than the community which supports it. If a country editor is not somewhat better, in all respects, than the average man in his community, he will be little more than a purveyor of news. If he has no part in the religious life of his town, he cannot hope to widen the influence of the church. If he is notoriously dissipated he can not be a force in elevating the standard of morals.

The country editor can not be perfect, no more than men in any other walk of life can attain perfection, but just to the extent that he is unwilling to strive for the highest possible degree of good citizenship himself will he lessen his personal influence with his readers and render his newspaper harmful rather than helpful. "Out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh," and you can no longer deceive all of the people even a part of the time. The first essential, therefore, in the plan of the country editor to take an effective part in the upbuilding of his community is personal fitness.

The next step toward the upbuilding of the rural community, so far as the country editor is concerned, is organized, or systematic and persistent publicity. The weakness of nearly every attempt by the average country newspaper to effect a reform in its community, to promote some local enterprise which ought in the very nature of things to succeed, or to defeat some vicious movement fostered by dishonest and selfish men, arises through the failure of the paper to keep everlastingly at it.

Newspapers have been known to practically revolutionize certain departments of community life. Take the case of the western country editor who led to the practice of what is known "as dry farming" in his state. This editor, located in a section where land was worth from $2.00 to $4.00 per acre for grazing, became convinced, after some research, that it could be made worth from $40 to $75 per acre for farming. He began to educate the landowners in his territory about "dry farming," and after some years of stubborn and dogged persistence he succeeded in convincing them and the farmers of the entire state, in fact, of the wisdom of his theory. Naturally he was rewarded with a full share of the prosperity which came to his readers through the greatly increased earning capacity of the land, and for which he more than any other person was responsible.

Another instance was the extraordinary success of the now famous "Moonlight Schools," by means of which Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart succeeded in driving illiteracy out of Rowan county, Kentucky, and no one will doubt that the success of this great movement was stimulated to an immeasurable degree by the fact that Mrs. Stewart was a "country editor" and conducted a well-directed campaign of publicity in connection with her personal activities.

There is not one of the objects which I have enumerated as properly within the power of the country press to influence one way or another but will respond readily to constant and systematic publicity. The movement for "good roads," which has been given such an impetus during the last few years, is the result almost entirely of a carefully planned and insistent campaign of newspaper publicity.

There is a mass of available information and well-edited literature touching every phase of rural life. The country editor who is interested in the growth and development of his neighborhood, and who would enhance his own fortune through the increased prosperity of his patrons, can easily prepare himself for a systematic campaign of education along any of these lines. His success then will depend entirely upon the tact and good common sense with which he conducts the required publicity. Shrewd business men have accumulated immense fortunes solely through the wise use of printer's ink. Good schools, better roads, more intelligent and profitable tillage of the soil, a higher standard of morality, will just as certainly follow well-directed campaigns of education conducted by a country editor whose integrity is unquestioned and whose industry and energy are equal to the demands which success will require.

This, in brief, is indicative of the plan in general which the country editor should pursue in aiding in the upbuilding of his community, with some reference to the fundamental requisites.

SPRING FEVER IS HEALTHY

It Indicates Fresh Hopes and Renewed Buoyancy of Spirit.

How wonderfully tight the spring wander-lust for the countryside grips one!

Spring fever, with all of its healthfulness, is the harbinger of fresh hopes and a buoyancy of spirit.

I noticed a passenger on a Detroit-Chicago train the other day who had started out on his trip with the evident intention of becoming deeply taken with one of the best sellers, that he might shorten the trip between the two cities. You have done the same thing yourself.

But his book had been cast aside. He had read only a few pages. His interest in it had lagged.

From the car windows he was counting the fields now bare of snow. The ditches were carrying away the water and the still less sluggish creeks were now strewn bearing the overflow to the rivers. The farmer, in his shirt sleeves, was repairing the fences after the winter drifts; the cattle showing proof of a winter's stabling and now heading here and there toward the meadows, seeking the new-green patches of grass; the farm help, in field and stubble, was putting into repair this and that necessary feature, here looking after his plow and there his harrow, and on all sides were scenes which reminded the traveler that spring was here, at last!

As the train sped onward and glimpses of the painter as he worked on the weather-beaten buildings were revealed, the interest of the tourist was aroused and, when I asked him the reason, he answered: "Spring is here and I feel its blood flowing!"

The truth was, that like many others, he was planning the work he was to do the coming summer. He was going out to the farm—his farm in Western Canada. He had his wells to dig, his horses to get into shape, his grain implements to fix up, his seed grain to prepare, and other details for the land that was ready to receive it. His was what might be termed an "unrest"—to get to the farm!

Thousands in Western Canada today are making the preparations that this interested man contemplated. Their summer fallows are ready for the wheat, their spring plowing is being attended to, fences are being rebuilt or being put into repair; indeed, the entire country is one great hive of industry.

Railroads are in readiness to take care of a great rush of settlers, those charged with the reception of whom are prepared to extend every courtesy and thus meet the rush with judgment and without the least friction. Thus, the enjoyment of the opening of spring is fully met.

At many of the stations throughout many of the middle western states, trains of settlers' effects are in readiness to move to Western Canada. Not only in these states are scenes of this kind to be witnessed, but, also, on either coast and throughout the eastern states there is the same activity among those going to Western Canada this spring. The crops have been heavy and all reports are that the winter was enjoyable; also, that the prospects for a satisfactory year were never better. There is plenty of land yet to be had by homesteading or otherwise. Adapted as Western Canada is, to small grain farming, it is especially adapted to cattle raising and many of the farmers are placing small and large herds, as their individual means will permit.

The illustrated literature sent out by the Canadian government agents tells the truth clearly and the inquirer should send for a copy and, if you be one of those who has an ambitious interest, you may be the gainer by a perusal of such information—straight, cold facts in themselves—Advertisement.

Backache Warns You

Backache is one of Nature's warnings of kidney weakness. Kidney disease kills thousands every year.

Don't neglect a bad back. If your back is lame—if it hurts to stoop or lift—if there is irregularity of the secretions—suspect your kidneys. If you suffer headaches, dizziness and are tired, nervous and worn-out, you have further proof.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a fine remedy for bad backs and weak kidneys.

AN OBIO CASE

Francis M. Hurman, 31 E. 14th St., Portsmouth, Ohio, says: "My back had given out completely and I had to use two crutches to get around. If I dropped one, I couldn't stoop to pick it up. My back was terribly lame and painful and by spells I was laid up in bed. I lost hope, as it seemed that nothing could be done for me. I fortunately heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and before long they made me strong and well, so that I could work. I have remained cured."

ROMAN CATHOLICISM.

We have been drawn into this controversy inadvertently, and we have hoped that after we had made the explanation that it would end there, but the Kentucky Irish American seems to want the last say, that we do not agree to, and we now hope that this matter may drop, as we do not care to go further, unless we are driven to do so.We are being swamped with complimentary letters from all over the Country, for the stand we have taken, but we believe that every man should worship as he chooses, even if his kind of religion does not exactly agree with ours, but we do dislike these controversies, and hope we have seen the end.The Knox Circuit Court will con-have it Mr. Stanley, and as soon to do it yourself.

THE LONDON BANK CLOSED

The First National Bank, at Lon-its kind in this country was forced to close its doors last week; but while it had to close there is no question but that it will pay every depositor 100 cents to the dollar deposited in that Bank. There is no chance for the depositors to lose in a National Bank, for the loans all stand for the depositor's money, beside that the capital stock must be made good by the stockholders, and every stockholder in the First National Bank, at London, will be required if necessary, to put up enough to equal the fifty thousand dollars of capital stock to pay the depositors, so there should be no uneasiness as to their money.

Will Increase Your Yield 10 to 30 Bu. Per Acre

We care not what corn you have now, if you plant FARMERS INTER-EST WHITE DENT alongside of it it will beat it 10 to 30 bushels per acre.
Farmers Interest has been bred for 18 years. Barren stalks have been eliminated, the ears grow very large and the quality is high. This variety has always won the highest honors at the great International Corn Expositions, open to the world, from the first one held in Chicago in 1887, down to and including this year, 1914.The selection, breeding and improvement of this corn has conferred on farmers, and all the people, greater benefits than all the work of Luther Burbank, the plant wizard of California.
The least expensive and most certain way to improve a corn crop is to let others do the breeding and you buy the result at a small price per

MAKES RAPID HEADWAY

Add This Fact to Your Store of Knowledge

Kidney disease often advances so rapidly that many a person is firmly in its grasp before aware of its progress. Prompt attention should be given the slightest symptom of kidney disorder. If there is a dull pain in the back, headaches, dizzy spells or a tired, worn-out feeling, or if the kidney secretions are offensive, irregular and attended with pain, procure a good kidney remedy at once. Thousands recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the statement below:

Mrs. Ramsey, Main St., Williamsburg, Ky., says: "Although I never used Doan's Kidney Pills myself, I don't hesitate to recommend them on account of the benefit they brought in the family. One of the family suffered a great deal from his back and kidneys. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and contained sediment. Pains in the back caused much suffering and nothing did him any good until he used Doan's Kidney Pills. This wonderful remedy gave prompt and permanent benefit."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Ramsey recommends.

All Growing Children

If your child is languid, bloodless, tired when rising, without ambition or rosy cheeks, Scott's Emulsion is a wonderful help. It possesses nature's grandest body-building fats so delicately predigested that the blood absorbs its strength and carries it to every organ and tissue and fibre.

No alcohol or narcotic in Scott's Emulsion, just purity and strength.

SYNOPSIS.

Tommy North, returning to his room in Mrs. Moore's boarding house at 2:30 a. m., discovers the body of Capt. John Hanks, another roomer, with a knife wound on his breast. Suspicion rests upon a man giving the name of Lawrence Wade, who had been heard quarreling with Hanks. During the excitement a strange woman, who gives her name as Rosalie Letrange, appears and takes into her own home across the street all of Mrs. Moore's boarders, including Miss Estrilla, an invalid, whose brother was a favorite among the other boarders. Wade is arrested. Mrs. Letrange, who while playing her trade as a trance medium, had aided Police Inspector Martin McGee several times, calls at his office to tell what she knows of the crime. While she is there, Constance Hanks, widow of the murdered man, whose existence had been unknown, appears. Mrs. Hanks, who she had left her husband and discloses the fact that Wade represented her and visited Hanks on the night of the murder in an effort to settle their affairs. She admits Wade was in love with her. Wade is held by the coroner's jury for the death of Hanks. Tommy North, who had been held by the police is released and returns to Mrs. Letrange's house. He becomes infatuated at once with Betsy Barbara, and at her urging prepares to establish the Thomas W. North Advertising Agency. Mrs. Letrange, with Inspector McGee, examines the house where Hanks was killed and finds on the fire escape outside Hanks's window a red shoe button, which she conceals. Mrs. Letrange secretly examines the shoes of her boarders in search of one the red button will fit. She pretends to go into a trance in Miss Estrilla's room and communes with spirits. Rosalie secures from Inspector McGee the services of an Italian detective, to work under her direction. Rosalie finds evidence to show that Estrilla's real name is Perez and that they formerly lived in Port of Spain. Rosalie goes into another trance in Miss Estrilla's room and gets the young woman's confidence. In succeeding scenes Rosalie leads Miss Estrilla to believe she is talking with the spirit of John Hanks, and gets information that leads her to prepare for a supreme test. With Inspector McGee and detectives at the windows, Rosalie, in a first trance, leads Miss Estrilla to tell, in a supposed conversation with the spirit of Hanks, that her brother Juan held the knife that pierced Hanks's heart. Confronted by the officers, Miss Estrilla makes a full confession. She tells how Hanks secured possession of her jewels and fled to New York, and how she and her brother Juan had traced him to Mrs. Moore's house.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

"I got the window catch open with a pen-knife—it was old and loose. I went over the whole room that night and again on another night—and found nothing. I did discover a little strong-box in the top drawer of the dresser. It lay wide open. It had a curious lock. In that, I was sure, he would put the jewels if he ever wanted to move them. There was no sign of the bill of sale. It occurred to me, then, that Captain Hanks might be carrying it on his person. I knew him to be a very sound sleeper—he had boasted to me of that, and he proved it by sleeping through a fire at his hotel when he was in Port of Spain. So I did a dangerous thing. Without speaking to Juan, I went down the fire escape at two o'clock in the morning of a night when Captain Hanks was at home, and looked through his pockets. I even examined all the papers in his wallet by the light of the electric torch. But it was not there. Juan, when I told him, was angry with me for taking such a risk. He made me promise never to enter the room again unless Captain Hanks was away.

And then we found that we must act quickly, or lose our property forever. Juan was watching Captain Hanks, following his movements very closely. That day—the day and night, when everything happened—the captain visited a jeweler in Maiden Lane—I think you call it. He stayed a long time. From there he went to a safe deposit bank. When he came out, he had a package in his pocket—Juan could see his coat bulge. Juan was afraid that he would go straight back to the jeweler and make the sale; and then our last hope would have been gone. Instead, Captain Hanks went to a cafe and sat alone a long time, drinking. When he left that place, he returned to Mrs. Moore's. And the shape of his pocket showed that he still carried the package.

"It was plain to us that the package contained the jewels, and that he intended to dispose of them at once—probably the next morning. That night the jewels would be in his room—and it was our last chance. Juan came to see me just after dinner. We talked it all over, and made our final plans. In the first place, it seemed best for Juan to do the work himself. I am a woman, and very weak with grief and illness. I could do nothing in case I was discovered. Though Juan had never been in the room I could tell him, exactly where to look—there heeded no doubt that Captain Hanks was keeping the strong-box for that very purpose.

"Then we considered another thing—how we should both get away. At first we decided that I should leave the house early, and that Juan, after getting the jewels, should follow me. But he did not dare to make the attempt before one or two o'clock in the morning, when Captain Hanks would surely be asleep—even the heaviest sleepers sometimes awake a long time after they go to bed. Mrs. Moore, we knew, was very watchful—she was afraid of burglars and she had a habit of running to her door whenever any one entered or left during the night. She would know that I had gone out; if Juan left at one or two in the morning, Mrs. Moore would take alarm, knowing as she did that I was out of the house. Being nervous and ignorant she was likely, we felt, to seize

(This is answer to an objection of Inspector McGee, who was urging her to come to the point.)

"At about ten o'clock, we decided just what to do.

"Juan and I are about of a size. I am large for a woman. He is small for a man. We do not resemble each other in the upper part of the face, but our mouths and chins are very much alike. It was one of our games at home to dress in each other's clothes.

"I would put on his ulster, pull his hat far down over my eyes, and fool people into believing that I was he. Further, his voice is light, and he can talk in falsetto. This was an old family game. We played eternally on the resemblance in the charades and theatricals that English people are always getting up.

"This was our plan: We were to change clothes. We had heard people singing in the parlor all that evening. The boarders all knew that Juan sometimes sang falsetto in fun. I was to watch my chance when the hall was vacant, pass the parlor, sing just a little in my own voice to make them believe I was Juan singing falsetto, and go to his rooms, where I was to wait. The night was rainy. It was natural, therefore, that I should be bundled up in a mackintosh and have my hat pulled down over my eyes.

"Dressed in my clothes, Juan was to enter Captain Hanks's room, get the jewels, leave by the door, go down the stairs and join me. I used sometimes to get a little outdoor exercise in the early morning when I need not fear meeting Captain Hanks, and when most of the city lights are out, so that the eyes have less strain. If Mrs. Moore waked, looked out, and saw Juan in my clothes, she would think it was I going for my exercise and take no alarm.

"In case Juan failed, he was to go back to my room and telephone to me, speaking Spanish and imitating my voice. Then, still dressed as Juan, I was to return to Mrs. Moore's early next morning and change clothes—but that part of our plan does not matter. "We began everything just as we planned. As I went down the stairs, I passed Mrs. Moore. In the hall, I saw a young man—Mr. Wade, I believe. I showed myself at the door and looked in, and sang a little. By the way they laughed and spoke, I knew that I had deceived them.

"I went straight to Juan's rooms. The elevator man in his hotel was fooled just as much as the boarders. It seems. I waited there a long time. Then Juan telephoned to me, talking in Spanish and calling me Juan, as if he were I. He said that Captain Hanks had been murdered and for me to come at once to him—that he needed me—he said it all as a hysterical woman would. Somehow I managed to do as he asked. I had to pass Captain Hanks's door. I heard people making a noise inside. Of course I did not enter. But right by the door I saw something bright. I knew it at once—it was one of my diamond buckles—one of the jewels which Captain Hanks had stolen from me. I picked it up, and went on to my room. Juan was there—in my dress. He kept me from fainting or dying while we changed back to our own clothes. I knew the rest from Juan.

(At about this point, occurred one of those eruptions of expletives, broken sentences, pleas, prayers, which always mar a confession for legal purposes, and is, therefore, edited out by the police before the finished typewritten statement goes back to the witness for his signature. This extraneous matter, you see, tends to create in the minds of unthinking persons a false sentiment for the criminal.)

"Juan said that he waited until after one o'clock. The house was quiet. From the window of the lumber room, he crawled to the fire escape. That window had a spring catch—you had only to pull it down and it locked of itself. Since he intended to leave Captain Hanks's room by the door, he closed this window behind him in order to cover up his tracks. That window of the captain's room which led to the fire escape, was open for ventilation. The rain was drifting through it. It occurred to Juan that everything would be safer if he closed it—he was afraid that a gust of wind might blow spray into Captain Hanks's face, and wake him. He did that; and he fastened the latch with the catch. Captain Hanks was asleep, breathing very heavily. Remember that.

"You have seen the room. The bureau, where I found the strong-box, was in the corner farthest from the window which Juan had just entered. Between it and the window were a table and Captain Hanks's bed. Juan carried on pocket electric torch. He turned it on the inside of the top bureau drawer. The box was there. Also, the key was in its lock. Juan thought it would be better to take the jewels out and leave the box. By doing that he could find whether the bill of sale was with the jewels, or whether he would have to search further for it. That was his great mistake. It was a trick box. Inside was an alarm-bell which rang whenever the cover was lifted.

"Juan opened it; the bell rang. Captain Hanks awoke at once. Juan had no time to move, before Captain Hanks pressed the button at the head of his bed and turned on the electric light. It must have bewildered him for a moment when he saw what appeared to be a woman standing by his bureau—but Juan held the strong-box in his hands. When he saw that, the captain came at him. Juan is a small man. Captain Hanks was big and very powerful. Just then, Juan saw on the table between them that great knife.

"Juan is a swordsman. He picked up the knife to stop the captain by threatening him with it—held the point toward his chest. Captain Hanks was a brave man, and very violent in anger. He had one of his terrible spells of temper now. He began to curse Juan. And then his hands went up to his head all of a sudden, and he tumbled over with all his great weight on the point of the knife. Juan did not trust—he is sure now he did not trust—but he placed Captain Hanks through." (In this place, Detective Kennedy had to edit the statement a great deal in order to make it seemly for the official archives.)

We will leave for a moment the police statement.

"Fell on it?" asked Martin McGee. "What's that you're trying to give me?" "On my soul and my mother's," solemnly declared Miss Estrilla. "Don't you see—can't you understand? A doctor in Port of Spain had warned him of it—Juan has done nothing since—nothing—but read medical books—he was dead before he touched the point of the knife—if Juan stabbed him, he stabbed a corpse—Captain Hanks died of apoplexy caused by his anger!"

During these last dramatic stages of Miss Estrilla's narrative, Rosalie Le Grange had slipped into the room. For a moment, Miss Estrilla gazed full upon her betrayer. For a moment, all that the tropics had given her of storm and flame flared from her eyes. Then that light died away. Thereafter, it was as though Rosalie had not been. If Miss Estrilla's glance, wandering from one point to another in her effort to concentrate on her narrative, touched upon Rosalie's figure; they looked straight through it.

Rosalie moved by imperceptible stages to Detective Kennedy's table. Cautiously, she picked up a fountain pen and a sheet of paper, and wrote:

"New York, Nov. 18, 190—

"I am telling to the police all I know of my part in the death of Capt. John H. Hanks. I have confessed that we followed him to America to get jewels, and that it was my brother Juan who appeared to have stabbed him."

The inspector was questioning gently now upon the apoplexy theory, hoping to trap the witness into an inconsistency. While she talked, Miss Estrilla (or Senorita Perez) paused from time to time as though gathering strength. Rosalie waited for such a pause. Then she braced the paper on a book and slipped up to Inspector McGee.

"You've forgotten this," she said. "you were going to get it signed at the very first, you know."

Inspector McGee's expression proved that he was puzzled. But he had become accustomed to following Rosalie's mental flights without knowledge of their destination. He nodded, therefore, and gave book, paper and pen to Miss Estrilla. It was the best possible compliment to the inspector's third degree methods, that she signed without a protest. Rosalie took the paper silently; but she did not deposit it where it belonged—among the official papers on Detective Kennedy's table. As she resumed her station outside the door, she was folding it in her fingers.

The police went on, then, with their searchings and questionings. They failed to notice, so absorbed were they,

the sound of retreating footsteps on the stairs.

We resume, with the painstaking Detective Kennedy, the statement of Margarita Perez, alias Estrilla.

"It was apoplexy. But Juan did not know it yet. He only knew that Captain Hanks had fallen on the knife and died, and that it would look like murder. He understood your law, he knew that to get our property he was committing what looked like burglary, and that a burglar who commits murder cannot plead self-defense. He waited by the window to see, whether the fall had disturbed the house. No one stirred—probably an elevated train was passing at the time it happened. Frightened as he was, he still thought of the jewels, and decided to take them, whatever the risk. He examined the box; the bill of sale was there. Circumstances had changed now; an empty strong-box in the room of a man who appeared to have been murdered, might set the police on the track. He thought of this. So he took the box, open as it was, switched off the electric light, and started to leave by the door. The catch of the spring lock was on. To lock the room from outside, he would have had to slam the door—you know how a spring lock works. That would have made a great deal of noise. It might awaken some one, who would hear footsteps going from Captain Hanks's room to mine. He put the box under his arm and fastened back the catch of the spring lock, so that he could close the door without sound. Of course, that left it unlocked, in doing all this, it seems, he spilled out of the box the diamond buckle which I found on the stairs."

"Juan went back to my room because he wanted time to think. His first idea was to leave the house dressed in my clothes, just as we had planned, and join me. Then we would escape together. But he knew that the police generally catch fugitives from justice in the end. We were in a strange country. We had no friends to help us. If we were missing from the house in the morning, if we were caught escaping, every one would believe us guilty. Then he had another idea. If I could return, still disguised as Juan, after the body was discovered, he would have a perfect alibi.

"While he was thinking about this, Mr. North came home and fell into the blood, as you know. "Immediately, Juan heard some one calling murder from below. That was his chance to carry out his plan. He telephoned me. I came. I have told you about that. He changed to his own clothes. I made him go downstairs and offer to help. My clothes, which Juan had worn down the fire escape in the rain, were still a little wet. I looked them over carefully; there were no blood stains on them. I put them by the register to dry; and I cleaned the shoes—that pair of red ones there in the closet. By the time they came to take me away to this house, no one would have known that my garments had been out in the wet. "When they moved me, I took away the jewels and the strong-box in my bedding. Later Juan dropped the box into the river, and sent the jewels to my cousin in Caracas.

"It was his plan to leave the country as soon as we might do so without attracting suspicion. But when they arrested Mr. Wade, I could not agree to that—I could not have his death on my soul. Juan was imploring me to leave; but I told him that I would not until Mr. Wade was released or acquitted. If it came to the worst, I would confess. I persuaded Juan that I was right. That is why we stayed. We had no other reason."

"I make this statement without hope (TO BE CONTINUED.)

OLD CONTRACTORS TO QUIT

English Company That Dammed the Nile to Retire From Business Next Year.

The passing away of one of the greatest contracting firms in the world, John Aird & Co., is announced for next year. The firm, which dammed the Nile and carried out other great works throughout the world, will cease to exist next September, by which time all outstanding contracts will have been completed.

The decision to go out of business has been taken by the present Sir John Aird, who succeeded his father in 1911, and inherited from him a fortune of over $5,000,000. The reason given is that, while the risks of contracting are as great as they ever were, the profits are not nearly so large as they were some twenty or thirty years ago. Great plants will be distributed and a staff of engineers and workmen, who are said to have no superiors, will be seeking new positions as a result of the action.

or offer of reward or immunity, solely in the interest of justice.

"MARGARITA PEREZ."

I reiterate—this narrative, which to you may seem to run so plainly and simply, was broken all along the way with police questions, with exclamations, with hesitations, with paroxysms, mental and physical. At times, the voice of Miss Estrilla (or Senora Perez) was a mere whisper of horror. At times it swelled to a full poignant note as she tried to make her points in Juan's defense. Now, as she finished, it simply ran down until it was silence. And with the tired motion of a child who falls asleep, she quietly fainted.

"Here, Kennedy, get some water!" exclaimed Inspector McGee. "Mrs. Le Grange—Rose—Mrs. Le Grange."

Receiving no answer, McGee searched the hall. She was not there. He went downstairs, calling. He had reached the second floor landing when Mrs. Leary's voice answered him from below.

"She went out a quarter of an hour ago," called Mrs. Leary. "You said we were to do what she told us, so I let her through. Wasn't that all right, Chief?"

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Ruse.

When Rosalie Le Grange named the Hotel Deldrich to the taxicab chauffeur, her object—she followed her but an old instinct—was to cover her tracks in case of many contingencies. She dismissed the cab, however, at the north door of the Deldrich, walked through the lobby to the west entrance, walked out on Broadway, walked a block south. There, spying another taxicab whose meter displayed the red sign "vacant," she commanded it, and announced her real objective.

"Casino—Central park—go fast," she said. During the drive she stared straight ahead and talked in low undertones to herself.

This was an old habit, born of her half-believed, half-assumed "mediumship" in her days of active practice. In these later days she was still wont to argue out in soft phrases of her lips the problems of her soul. One who had overheard those scattered phrases now would have known that she was still fighting for a decision.

"Well, ain't the world been good to me lately?" she was saying as they swept into the Park entrance. "Can't I afford to take a chance with myself—an' happiness?" And then, "Oh, how will Martin look at it—Martin!"

A little later, as the taxicab took the rolling drive beside a park lake, she was saying:

"I couldn't bear it if he was sent to the chair—I could never live through it—I'd die, too." It seemed that upon this statement she made her decision. For she talked to herself no more until the taxicab rolled up before the Casino and stopped. And as she rose, her smile broke out for the first time in that passage. But it was a grave smile, whose softness did not reach to her eyes—as though one smiled with the humor of God at the tragic comedy in this world.

"An' she called me a traitor—an' she'll always believe it, what's more," she said.

The piazza of the Casino, so gay and colorful in summer, lay bleak and bare now under the cold November wind and fading afternoon light, so that Rosalie, sensitive to physical impressions what with the tenacity of her soul, shuddered as she passed from the steps to the door. Within, only a few lights were on; the restaurant, plainly, was letting business fade away toward its winter quiescence. Near the door sat a couple; then two men; and there, in the remote corner, was a glint of golden hair which could be only Betsy-Barbara's. Opposite sat the focus of her search—him whom Betsy-Barbara still thought to be Senor Estrilla. He was smiling just then, and his hands were playing in swift, expressive little gestures. As Rosalie Le Grange waved aside the head waiter and took her interminable journey across the room, it occurred to her that however she finished and tied this complex web of hers, these might be the last smiles on his lips for many a weary day.

Caravaggio Picture Found.

An important find has been made in the art collection of Marchese della Stufa at France. It is a painting by Caravaggio, which had been lost sight of for many years. The painting was known to connoisseurs through a print in the Galleria degli Uffizi.

Sig di Pietro, the secretary of this gallery, was determined to find the picture. It was known that in the year 1700 it was in possession of the Cerretani family, which is now extinct.

Sig di Pietro, while examining Marchese della Stufa's collection saw the painting and immediately identified it. The Uffizi print is an exact reproduction of the picture, which is a typical Caravaggio. It depicts six youths, one of whom is playing a violin, one a lute and one a flute, while two are singing and one is listening.—New York Sun.

The Chewaures, a race of 7,000 people, in Tiflis, southern Russia, know nothing of the use of money as a medium of exchange. The unit of value among these primitive people is the cow. ### OF INTEREST TO BARBOURVILLE READERS.

For months Barbourville citizens have seen in these columns enthusiastic praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, by residents of this locality.

Would these prominent people recommend a remedy that had not proven reliable?

Would they confirm their statements after years had elapsed if personal experience had not shown the remedy to be worthy of endorsement?

The following statement should carry conviction to the minds of every Barbourville reader:

Mrs. Julia A. Parker, College Hill, London, Ky., says: "I was laid up with my back and kidneys and confined to the house. My back ached constantly and was so painful that I couldn't lift. I would be up one day and down the next and was always suffering from the terrible ache in my back. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I began taking them. They helped me wonderfully and by using them I have escaped all the sufferings of the previous winters. I gladly vouch for what I said several years ago commending Doan's Kidney Pills." ## WARREN

(by Matt)

S. P. Carmack left today for his home in Bristol to spend Easter.

Mr. T. Lindsay and wife, of Tways, were visiting Harry Lindsay Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Pierce, of Anchor, spent Sunday in Warren.

Dr. and Mrs. Sned will entertain informally for Mrs. A. P. Thomas on Friday evening.

C. M. Green, of Barbourville, has accepted a position with the Carter Coal Co.

The coal business is looking better now and prospects for a good run this month are bright.

Mrs. Dr. Westerfield, of Clovis, New Mexico, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Westerfield at the Club House.

J. Calvin Holmes, of the Hewley Darst Coal Co., Knoxville, was in town last week.

Miss Kate Litton, of Castlewood, Va., has accepted the position as cashier in the store of the Carter Coal Company.

The many friends of Miss Fannie Kate Dickinson will be glad to learn that she got the appointment for the post office at Castlewood, Va., having passed the examination successfully and will soon enter upon her new duties as Postmistress.

Mr. W. R. Raney, who was formerly Mining Engineer, has been promoted to the position of Superintendent to succeed C. R. Luttrell, who resigned to take charge of the mine at Hazard in which he owns an interest. Mr. Luttrell was liked by everyone and made a success in the business, and the best wishes of all are that he may be as successful in Hazard as he was in Warren.

One of the most delightful entertainments of the season was the six o'clock dinner on last Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Cliff E. Bullard in honor of Mrs. A. P. Thomas, of Richmond, Va. The evening was greatly enjoyed by those present. The vocal selections by Mrs. Thomas added immensely to the enjoyment of the occasion. Mrs. Thomas was, for several years, a member of a prominent church choir in Richmond and her singing has been a treat to those of us musically inclined.

The chances for a good base ball team in Warren this season are fine. We have some fine material for a team this year in assistant superintendent C. F. Raney, who played on the Gary, W. Va., team for several years, and Harry Lindsay and Russell Stone, both of the Pulaski, Va. team; also C. M. Green, was a member of the last year's team. Our team is still smarting under the defeat that the Barbourville team administered to them last year and all they want is a whack at them this season and then you will see some fur fly—so says some of the fans.
